Angolans' Report Of New Troop Push Denied by Pretoria

LISBON — South African troops have launched a new push into Angola's sparsely populated Cuando Cubango province, bordering South-West Africa (Namibia), official Angolan sources said Thursday in Lisbon, In Pretoria, however, a South African Defense Ministry spokesman called the report "ridiculous propaganda ... obviously aimed at the special session of the United Na-tions" on Namibia, scheduled to begin Thursday in New York. Meanwhile, The Associated Press quoted a diplomatic source toria as saying Thursday that South African troops killed two Soviet wives in addition to two senior Soviet officers in the attack on Angola last week. The source, who declined to be identified, said one of the women was married to one of the dead lieuteoant colonels and the other to Sgt. Maj. Nickolay Feodorovich Pestretsov, 36, who South Africa says was taken prisoner. The dead soldiers have not been identified. The Angolan sources in Lisbon said South African ground forces were driving toward Mavinga, a major town in the vast, savannahcovered province in Angola's southeastern corner, about 186 miles (300 kilometers) from the ### Soviet Maneuvers. ...

Speaking at the end of a two-day session on the eve of large Soviet maneuvers near Poland, Mr. Kania also stressed that Moscow was convinced that Poland could solve its problems alone.

Western defense sources in Warsaw did not link the Soviet maneuvers directly to developments in Poland.

MOSCOW — The Kremlin on Thursday launched a bitter denunciation of Poland's independent trade union Solidarity and coupled the attack with an unprecedented media blitz about the forthcoming Soviet war games along the Polish border.

The media reports included the disclosure that reservists had been called up to bring the divisions involved up to full strength. In a detailed ideological attack on the Polish union, the Soviet trade union daily Trud assailed Solidarity as an anti-Socialist op-position that wants to take political power and "restore capital-

Two-Pronged Warnings

But diplomatic observers said the two-pronged warnings suggest renewed Soviet pressure on Solidarity on the eye of the labor union's first congress rather than an impending military move to stifle Poland's renewal process.

While the article in Trud represents a detailed restatement of Moscow's abhorrence of the very notion of independent unions in a Socialist state, it was nevertheless placed in a relatively minor daily rather than in the authoritative Communist Party newspaper

Moreover, the secretive Soviet military establishment has taken the unprecedented step in publicizing what are normally regarded in the Soviet Union as state secrets.

First, it was the official news agency Tass that disclosed that reservists had been called up. The account sought to suggest that the scope of the move was considerable by saying that many factories have pledged to meet their production norms although their personnel had been called to service.

On at least two occasions since the Polish crisis erupted a year ago, the Russians are reported to have called up reserves. But in both cases this was handled as military secrets.

U.S., Russia Discussed A Key Arms Pact Issue

By Leslie H. Gelb

New York Times Service States and the Soviet Union have opened preliminary talks on the key issue of how to verify compliance with future arms control agreements, according to the State Department.

Department spokesman Dean E. Pischer made the statement Wednesday in confirming a meeting Aug. 21 between Eugene V. Rostow, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agentage A. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger also denied the Times account, saying that future arms agreements would have to be verifiable, including "cooperative measures" if necessary, but that cooperative measures did not necessari-

Vatican Reported To Suspect KGB In Pope Shooting

The Guardian

LONDON — The Vatican has informed the Reagan administration that it believes the Soviet KGB was involved in the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul

The accusation is reported to be taken seriously in Washington. It has been discussed by senior politi-cal figures and analyzed by the CIA and the National Security Council, but American intelligence specialists have reached no judgment on the evidence.

The suggestion that the Soviet Union was linked to the attempted murder of a Polish pope has strengthened the belief among some defense and intelligence analysts that Russia intends to intervene directly in Poland at some

A British television program also reported Thursday night from Rome that both the Vatican and the Italian security services suspect KGB involvement in the shooting in St. Peter's Square on May 13.

The program also included photographs suggesting that the Turkish summan, Mehmet Ali Agea, was accompanied by another armed man at the time of the phrase used in a memorandum of conversation made available to The New York Times by two highlevel Reagan administration officials. Asked how this phrase was explained in conversation with Mr. Bessmertnykh, one of the officials replied: "On-site inspection, giving information."

Among arms control experts the phrase generally is meant to include efforts by one side to help the other side monitor compliance with agreements.

One of the officials who provided the information was contacted and asked about the State Depart-ment denial. He did not deny that a colleague had said "on-site in-spection," but he insisted that the phrase had oot been used in the Rostow-Bessmertnykh conversa-

Other administration officials questioned Wednesday said that nothing was specifically said about on-site inspections. They said that President Reagan has made no de-

These talks are scheduled to begin soon after mid-November and are intended to cover the deployment of medium-range missiles in Europe, Certain European leaders are concerned about what they see as the Reagan administratioo's lack of interest in such talks.

Administration officials also said that the Rostow-Bessmert-oykh meeting came about only af-ter a bitter battle between Mr. Rostow and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. over whether Mr. Rostow should conduct such guaranteed job and income security.

For several months, China's leaders have been experimenting quietly in dozens of factories with ootions that workers who do not work should be subjected to pay cuts and, if that fails, be dismissed. These ideas were put forward last week in a front-page article in the Communist Party's official newspaper, People's Daily, which leaders often use to signal policy changes. The newspaper reported that since April 30 factories in Shanghai have been experimenting with forms of "labor discipline" in which unproductive workers receive a range of warnings, demerits and pay cuts eventually leading to dismissal. It did not say whether any workers had actually been dismissed.

Similar Experiments

Similar experiments elsewhere have been reported in the regional press to recent mouths. In the Shenzhen export processing zone for foreign investors ocar Hong Kong, managers have insisted, with mixed success, on the right to dismiss troublesome Chinese workers. Combined with the introduction of bonus payments and piece-rate wages more than two years ago, the threat of dismissal, if expanded around the country, might affect the 100 million urban workers in much the same way that incentives and responsibility systems have door in the countryside for China's 800 million peasants.

Chinese leaders say the abandonment of egalitarianism in rural areas has stimulated agricultural productivity.

In some areas, the equivalent of family farms are back.

The amount of land that can be used for private household plots has been increased from 7 percent to 15 percent. These and other rural incentive programs have greatly livened competition and increased production. Peking says the posi-tive effects amount to its greatest success story in the posi-

Similarly transforming urban lethargy, however, appears to be a much more complicated and sensitive problem, since urban workers are more politically aware.

Factories Idled

China's severe economie retrenchment has shut down or idled thousands of factories, some because they were producing irrelevant products and others because they lacked supplies of energy and raw materials. As a result, millions of workers continue to draw base wages while undergoing retraining or attending schools.

The unemployment figure hovers around 10 million, and each year nearly that many youths reach working age with no prospects for higher education. There is a hiring freeze in all central government factories and offices — siblings of ranking party officials are not affected by the freeze — and little new investment to build new factories. little new investment to build new factories.

Chinese officials have acknowledged a few cases of labor unrest, including work stoppages. But they clamped down hard last year on efforts by some local trade unions to act independently outside party supervision.

The government's main problem is to break the grip of

Spanish Socialists Air NATO Plan Objections

By James M. Markham New York Times Service

MADRID - Feiipe González, the Socialist leader, on Thursday launched his party's campaign against the government's proposal to bring Spain into the North Atlanue Treaty Organization, which is expected to be put to a vote of parliament later this month.

"Up to now, no one has been able to demonstrate that the security of Spain will be greater as a re-sult of joining NATO, said the 39-year-old Socialist chief, who criticized Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo on grounds of failing to explain possible advantages of the alliance to the country.

Both the Socialists, the main opposition grouping, and the Com-munists oppose the government's decision to make Spain the 16th member of the Atlantic alliance. But Mr. González has carefully modulated his opposition to NATO membership to avoid accusations that his party is neutralist or anti-Atlanticist

Not Against NATO

"I must make clear that we are not against NATO," Mr. González told a news conference. "We are against the entry of Spain to NATO. We do not aim to alter the world order. We want to diminish international tensions."

Through a limited campaign of billboards and speeches, the Socialists are collecting signatures to demand that the NATO question be put to a national referendum an idea that Mr. Calvo Sotelo has firmly rejected. The NATO issue has aroused little passion in Spain, and many politicians consider Mr. González's opposition somewhat testimonial. The government, which controls roughly 165 seats in the 350-member lower house, has lately shown signs of unease over the parliamen-tary logistics of the NATO question. Before the August vacation break, government strategists seemed confident of securing the votes of the conservative Democratic Coalition as well as those of moderate Basque and Catalan regional parties in support of the At-

Basque Nationalists

But the middle-of-the-road Basque Nationalist Party has lately been angered by Mr. Calvo Sotelo's seeming coolness to home rule, while the resignation this week of Justice Minister Francisco Fernández, Ordóñez, has raised doubts about the solidity of the ruling Union of the Democratic Center's bloc of 165 seats.

Mr. Ordónez is the standardbearer of the government party's self-styled "social democratic" wing, which in June broke party discipline and joined the Socialists in strengthening a milestone divorce bill. uon led by Adolfo Suarez, the former premier, bave questioned the riming of the NATO vote.

Faced with these uncertainties, Mr. Calvo Sotelo has opted for a parliamentary procedure on the NATO question that would only require the majority of those custing ballots. Both leftist parties have sharply criticized the recourse to a "simple" majority on such an important issue, and the Communists have suggested that it may be unconstitutional

The Cortes vote is expected to trigger a swift response from NATO headquarters in Brussels formally inviting Spain to join the alliance. This decision must also be confirmed by the parliaments and governments of the 15 NATO states, though no serious opposition to Spanish entry is predicted from any of them. It appears that Spain could be a full-fledged alliance member early next year.

Mr. González and the Socialists have been put in an awkward situation by the support of France and West Germany — both led by So-cialists — for Spanish membership in NATO. The Spanish Socialist leader suggested tartly on Thurs-day that President Francois Mitterrand's new government could demonstrate greater "coherence" if, in addition to urging Spanish membership, France itself rejoined NATO's military command.

The NATO issue has become intertwined with the uncompleted nesotiations between Spain and the United States for the renewal of a bilateral defense treaty, which expires on Sept. 21. The treaty gives the U.S. Air Force and Navy the use of Spanish bases.

The Socialists support a renewal of the agreements with the United States, but Mr. González said Thursday that he had "grave suspicions" that the American side in the talks was insisting on the right to use Spanish bases "outside the area of NATO coverage, in third conflicts," He said that the U.S. downing last month of two Libyan jets highlighted the dangers for Spain of becoming embroiled in conflicts with traditionally friendly Arab states.

"What I know is that the position of the United States is more intransigent than ever," said the Socialist leader. He recalled that, under the Franco regime, Spanish negotiators were repeatedly warned about resistance in the U.S. Senate to their demands. "Finally." be said, referring to Spain's newly democrane status, "our congress can create problems, too."

Neither the U.S. Embassy nor the Spanish government had any comment on Mr. González's assertion about American demands in the bilateral negotiations, But informants close to the talks said that it appeared likely that the existing treaty will be extended until

Spain Hears Tale of Botched Coup

By James M. Markham

New York Times Service MADRID - If Gen. José Juste had not been wearing combat fatigues on Feb. 23, would Spain today be a military dictatorship? Spaniards have had the occasion to pose this and a few other unsettling what-ifs and might-have-beens of history after a summer of pre-trial newspaper leaks of the testimony of soldiers caught up in February's unsuccessful coup d'etat. But the deluge of leaks, started by defense law-yers for some of the 32 officers accused in the plot, appears to have backfired against its au-thors. Instead of high-minded patriots, the defendants emerge from their extensive testimony as incompetent and undecided plotters, unwilling finally to assume responsibility for their botched And, with their court-martial nearing, the prin-cipal defendants have failed to marshal any proof for their contention that King Juan Carlos I was somehow involved in the plot. The weight of testi-mony makes it clear that the monarch was ### surprised by, and scuttled, the rebellion. Military Mastermind

The evident military mastermind of the attempted coup was Lt. Gen. Jaime Milans del Bosch, the ultra-rightist captain-general of the Valencia region who mobilized his troops hours before a band of rebel Civil Guards invaded the Cortes and seized many of the nation's political leaders shortly after 6 p.m. on Feb. 23.

But the thousands of words of leaked testimony suggest strongly that Gen. Milans del Bosch had not secured very firm promises from other mili-tary commanders to join the rebellion, and was instead counting on a snowball effect after the 1st Armored Division moved on Madrid.

The commander of this 9,000-man elite division. Gen. José Juste, acknowledged in his testimony that he was duped into mobilizing his force by his chief of staff, Col. José Ignacio San Martin, and other conspirators who assured him they were acting on behalf of King Juan Carlos.

Earlier in the day, Col. San Martin had attempted to bring the malleable Gen. Juste together with Gen. Alfonso Armada, the other major figure in the rebellion, at a military reception outside Madrid. But Gen. Juste was not wearing the appropriate uniform, and could not be admitted — and thus did not hear Gen. Armada's arguments for joining the plot.

Second Thoughts

Only at 6:45 p.m., as his units prepared to move on Madrid, did Gen. Juste have second thoughts about the repeated assurances that Gen. Armada, a former tutor of the king, was with the monarch at the Zarzuela Palace directing operations. Gen. Juste telephoned the palace and was told that Gen. Armada was not there, and was not expect-

Rather than acknowledge that they were striving to save Spain from terrorism and political dis-order — as they evidently believed at the time the plotters modestly downplay their own roles. Gen. Milans del Bosch maintains that he proclaimed a state of emergency in his command, suspended constitutional rights and sent his tanks into the streets of Valencia simply to guarantee law and order, while Gen. Armada claims ignorance of the plan to seize the Cortes on Feb. 23.

Several senior officers have testified that Gen. Armada, who was deputy army chief of staff, im-mediately proposed himself to head an emergency overnment after the Cortes was occupied, warnmg that other commanders were about to join the uprising. Confronted under oath with this damning testimony, Gen. Armada responded: "I don't recall saying this."

Joint Accord Worked Out On Cambodia

Sihanouk, Son San Prepare Declaration

SINGAPORE — Two non-Com-munist Cambodian resistance leaders announced Thursday they had worked out a joint declaration outlining a program for common ac-tion against Soviet-backed Viet-namese forces in their homeland.

The declaration, drafted by the former head of state, Prince Norodom Sihanouk, and Son San, bead of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front, will be presented when they meet the Khmer Rouge leader, Khieu Samphan, here Friday.

Son San said the statement would stress the will of the three groups to cooperate and lay the foundation for further negotiations leading to a united front.

But Prince Sihanouk was more optimistic when he said: "I am hopeful the three groups will sign a joint declaration tomorrow to unite all patriotic Kampucheans [Cambodians] against the Viet-namese military occupation."

Details Undisclosed

Neither Prince Sihanouk nor Son San, who had served as his premier, disclosed details of the declaration but they indicated they did not expect any serious opposition from the Khmer Rouge. Son San made clear that the front would not drop its main conditions for joining a coalition with the Communist Khmer Rouge for fear it would lose popular support.

The front has demanded all key portfolios in a coalition as well as accelerated military aid to strengthen its own forces and the voluntary exile of a number of discredited Khmer Rouge leaders.

Son San declined to say whether all his demands would be included in the joint declaration. He also declined to comment on Khieu Samphan's proposal to form a loose coalition that would allow the resistance groups to maintain their separate political identities and freedom of action.

He said the joint declaration of intent, setting their basic goals. would help current efforts to retain the UN seat held by the ousted Khmer Rouge government, known as Democratic Kampuchea.

By Michael Getler Washington Post Service
HONOLULU — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has directly challenged the assessments of White House officials who claimed earlier this week that President Reagan is prepared to cut as much as $30 billion from projected

Reminded that White House chief of staff James A. # Reagan Officials Now Pessimistic On Chances for Balanced Budget

By Edward Cowan

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — With high interest rates jeopardizing pros-pects for a surge in business investment, some administration officials have begun to acknowledge privately that the economy in 1982-1984 may be less exuberant than the administration has fore-

In part for that reason, officials say, President Reagan's goal of a balanced federal budget by 1984 is unlikely to be realized. Consequently, a shift in the way officials talk about the fiscal outlook is occurring. Instead of predicting for 1984 the first black-ink budget result since 1969, officials are emphasizing the trend toward smaller deficits.

Congressional experts say pri-vately that a 1982 deficit of $58 billion to $60 billion is "almost blinds to soo blinds is afficed locked in." Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Congressional Budget Office, was expected to testify along this line before the House Budget Committee Thursday.

Outlays Compared

In the midyear budget review in July, the administration forecast spending in fiscal year 1982 at $704.8 billion, as against outlays of $661.2 billion in fiscal 1981, which ends Sept. 30.

The administration has begun its first comprehensive review of the economic outlook since the optimistic forecast, or "rosy scenar-io," of last February. More likely than not, according to Jerry L. Mr. Jordan added, however, that slower economic growth in 1982

Some administration fiscal experts describe the probable scaling down of the GNP numbers as "a macy than that used by arms-control specialists. As with all diplomatic discourse, some of it is meant to encourage precision and some of it to encourage ambiguity. When the chosen words or phrases are artfully ambiguous, it is usually not an effort by one side to mislead the other. More often it is an attempt to accommodate conflicting objectives that cannot be reconciled. The negotiators are thoroughly familiar with all of the explicit and implicit meanings of these terms of art. And so are many of the journalists who cover arms-control issues.

Leslie H. Gelb of The New York Times is such a journalist. He has been involved in arms control as a government official in the Defense and State departments, as a scholar at the Brookings Institution, and as a reporter. As a result of many years experience in the field, he speaks the language and knows what questions to ask. When he saw the phrase "cooperative measures" in a memorandum on a conversation between a U.S. official and a Soviet diplomat, he asked how the phrase was explained by the American, Eugene V. Rostow, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. One of the two high Reagan administration officials who gave Mr. Gelb the document replied: "On-site inspection, giving information."

Mr. Gelb, naturally, recognized an important story. The Soviet Union has consistently opposed on-site inspection on the ground that it would facilitate spying. U.S. insistence on including it in any future agreement could seriously stall the arms-control process. But if the Soviet Union were to agree to on-site inspection, an important step would be taken toward the control of both strategic and medium-range nuclear missiles.

As soon as Mr. Gelb's article appeared (IHT, Sept. 3), the part about on-site inspec-tion was denied by Dean Fischer, the State Department spokesman. But the denial, too, was artful. Mr. Fischer said that "the issue of on-site inspection did not come up in that discussion." He declined to elaborate on what "cooperative measures" were discussed. When reached for comment on the denial, one of Mr. Gelb's original sources for the story insisted only that the specific phrase "on-site inspection" was not used in the conversation between Mr. Rostow and the Soviet chargé d'affaires, Alexander A. Bessmert-

Both the level of Mr. Gelb's experience and the nature of the denials strongly suggest that if "on-site inspection" was not explicitly mentioned in the conversation, it was at least implicit. If it was, despite the denials, that is not such a bad thing. Verification is the essence of a successful arms-control agreement and it is becoming progressively more difficult to obtain the necessary information by distantly placed satellites and sensors. The United States is right to continue to raise the issue of on-site inspection with the Soviet Union as long as it doesn't make its acceptance a condition for entering negotiations. And if artful language or judicious silence is required to bring about talks, there isn't anything wrong with that, either.

INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE.

U.S. presidents detest changing their minds in public. But, awkward though the exercise might be, it's preferable to sticking with a bad position. The financial markets are now assisting Mr. Reagan in his decision to review defense spending. They find Mr. Reagan's forecasts of the budget deficits to be unrealistic as long as the administration holds to its past projections of defense spending and Social Security,

The administration apparently intends to launch a Social Security bill soon after Congress reconvenes next week. Now the White House says that defense outlays are going to have to be scaled downas well. The figures are not precise, but they establish a general order of magnitude.

The changes announced this week won't make much difference in spending during 1982. The defense budget runs with tremendous momentum, and substantial changes can be imposed only over a period of several years. The Reagan defense budget for 1982 is larger by only a small margin - about 2 percent - than the figure that President Carter proposed last winter just before leaving office. For the immediate future, Mr. Reagan's willingness to cut back on defense is important chiefly as a conciliatory gesture toward those senators, Republican as well as Democratic, who are uneasy about last spring's extraordinarily high estimates. The cooperation of those senators is going to be essential to the administration this fall in getting other kinds of spending cuts — in Social Security, among other things - that have earlier effects.

For the fiscal year 1984, the White House is evidently now proposing a level of defense spending that is almost exactly the same as that in the Carter budget last January. The original Reagan program in March called for an annual increase in defense spending, throughout his term, of about 8 percent a year in real terms — that is, after inflation. He is now evidently proposing to bring that rate of increase down to about 6 percent, the track that the Carter administration was on.

No doubt some of the Democrats will charge him with copyright infringement, while some of the military - and, especially, military contractors - will cry betrayal. But there's a sense of reality to the revised Reagan numbers that the earlier ones lacked: In view of the Carter budget, they can also claim to be based on a broad bipartisan consensus - not necessarily a bad thing in na-

The White House is inclined to blame this revision on poor performance by the American economy. That is one accusation the economy does not have to bear. The original Reagan budget was based on economic forecasts that were far too optimistic, and everybody knew it. If anything, the behavior of the economy is currently more satisfactory than est people expected six months ago. Who for example, thought then that unemployment would fall this summer? The arithmetic showed from the beginning that there was not room for both Mr. Reagan's tax cut and Mr. Reagan's defense increase. The tax cut has been enacted, and defense spending inevitably must be fitted to it.

U.S. defense policy has repeatedly got into trouble by putting too much emphasis on budget totals, and not nearly enough on how that money will be spent. The Reagan de-fense figures of last March were worked up in great haste, with no clear sense of program requirements, to indicate a certain direction and intention. The new numbers reflect not only economic necessity but also a clearer judgment of what's actually needed and how fast it can actually be achieved. Military strength depends on not only the number of dollars available but also the wisdom with which they are spent. The dollars will be adequate. Wisdom is always the scarcer com-

Speer, Hess and Punishment

In an era when confession to sins real, imagined or as yet uncommitted is commmon, Albert Speer, the only Nazi leader tried at Nuremberg to admit guilt, may seem less a penitent than a man ahead of his time. And his much-praised defiance of Hitler's command to turn the defeated Germany into a desert can be construed as a kind of Pavlovian response to the order to destroy: It is the nature of the architect to build.

But had Speer been hanged, or had he died with his leader in that legendary bunker, history would have lost an invaluable witness. Set designer for the Third Reich, the administrative genius who kept the German war machine running, he survived to tell the world exactly how it was done.

"Hess was noticeable because be was so plainly mad: so plainly mad that it seemed shameful that he should be tried," Rebecca West wrote of Speer's companion at Spandau prison, Rudolf Hess. Hess, now 87, is still there; Speer, of whose sanity there has never been doubt, was released 15 years ago.

Since then he had lived in the country with his wife, and his memoirs made him rich. When he died this week at the age of 76, he was in London preparing for a television in-

Although Speer claimed to know little or nothing of the death camps, he knew Adolf Hitler very well, and in him this Faust found his Mephistopheles. "Dazzled by the possi-bilities of technology," Speer wrote much lat-er, "I devoted crucial years of my life to serving it." Dazzled by the possibilities of his own intelligence, be spent crucial years of his life divorcing it from humanity.

Erosion of U.S. Position on El Salvador

By Philip Geyelin

WASHINGTON — The bottom is begin-tration's heavy investment in El Salvador. The evidence is all around: in the tide of battle (or terrorism, if you will); in the U.S. Congress; in U.S. public opinion; and most recently in the blessing bestowed upon the revolutionary forces by Mexico and France.

But nowhere is it more telling than in the administration's own response to assorted adverse turns. When the leftist guerrillas take to economic warfare (knocking out bridges and power plants), the State Department complains of a "cynical disregard for Salvadoran noncombatants and a willingness to attempt to destroy the country if they can't overthrow the government." The traditional weapons of in-surgency, that is to say, are suddenly unfair.

Threats From Haig

When the rebels demonstrate growing inside strength, in all corners of the countryside, it's a measure of nothing more than increasing Soviet-Cuban support from outside. So Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. threatens new, unspecified measures to get at "the source," Cuba, and promises to remonstrate with the mastermind of it all, the Russians, when he meets with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko later this month.

When U.S. supplied helicopters break down or get shot up, so that all 10 already on hand often are grounded at the same time, the answer is to send four more.

The policy, we are told, is under "review." But the emerging fixes add up to nothing more than more of the same: more aid, more con-centration on the external content of the conflict, more weight on the outcome as an acid test of U.S. will and ability to contain international Communism's encroschments, world-

Hence the administration's bitter private re sentment — and public playing down — of the joint decision by France and Mexico to recognize the various diffuse and sometimes divided mine the various diffuse and sometimes divided revolutionary movements and guerrilla groups as a "representative political force." The motive in both cases has to do with domestic political needs, the line goes: Both France's new Socialist Party President Francois Mitterrand and Mexico's President José Lôpez Portillo must play to local and international "Socialist" sentiment.

Central Weakness

Perhaps so — up to a point. But the effect is no less damaging to the administration's cause, or to the position of the Salvadoran government, on that account. For the French-Meximum. can declaration goes to the central weakness in the current Reagan administration strategy.

It is a strategy which is, at once, very simple and very cynical. It rules out negotiations with the rebels for a share of power they "have not been able to win on the battlefield," in the words of Thomas O. Enders, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs. That sounds fair enough; that kind of negotiations, interestingly, is not even the goal of the French and the Mexicans.

And it does not rest on hopes of total mili-tary victory. Rather it hangs heavily on elec-tions scheduled for the next March for a new constituent assembly, and a "new" govern-ment. The catch is in who will be permitted to participate. Ironically, the official Communist Party, no real threat, would be "eligible"; the test for the rest of the revolutionaries would be their willingness to "renounce violence," which is to say, to abandon their only influential in-

What this means is that precisely the opposition movements recognized by France and Mexico would be disenfranchised, either for lack of formal organization, either technically or by their own choice — a choice richly informed by a dismal record of past El Salvadoran elections. Under the malign control of the military, only an outcome tolerable to the entrenched objectory has traditionally been alleged to extend lowed to stand.

"There's where I have my real problem with the administration approach," says Rep. Stephen J.Solazz, a Democrat from New York, one of the leaders of a growing swarm of congressional critics the administration will face this fall. "They're defining eligibility for participation in the election in a way that excludes expressly those forces whose participation is

That's the point the French and Mexicans are making. Their declaration to the UN Security Council seeks not a "settlement," but "a process of political solution," a "new internal order" in which the armed forces "will be restructured and the conditions created for the respect of popular will."

Sharing the Risk

If that's what the administration really wanted, it would embrace the French-Mexican initiative, thereby sharing the burden — and the risk — and neutralizing the acid test it has movisely made of El Salvador. But what the administration wants was plainly revealed by U.S. Ambassador Deane R. Hinton in an interview with Christopher Dickey of The Washington Post the other day. "The elections will indicate very clearly that the vast majority of people are in favor of something different than those five or ten or lifteen thousand misguided individuals that are trying to destroy the coun-

Austria: Steady in an Unbalanced World

By C.L. Sulzberger

L ANGAU BEI GAMING, Austria — It is arguable that the Austrian people have never had it so good as now despite a cata-strophic 20th century which saw this nation lose two devastating wars, co-opted into Hitler's pan-Germany, occupied by enemy ar-mies and diminished by 1914's proud Habsburg empire to a little land of less than 8 million inhabit-

This ministate replaced a vain-glorious imperium including Hungary, Czechoslovakia, part of Po-land, Romania and Italy, plus a chunk of Yugoslavia all the way down to Montenegro.

Anyone driving around the cump remnant must nevertheless be impressed by the success with which today it faces world prob-lems, keeping its population healthy, prosperous and employed.

Sharp Contrast

In such respects Austria is in sharp contrast with contemporary Britain, vestige of an even more enormous empire, which is contin-ually preoccupied with taut and angry economic, labor-capital, ra-cial, separatist and terrorist prob-

The number of ethnic Austrians has changed little this century. There were 6.4 million in 1919 when the Habsburg-ruled agglomeration was split up; there are about 7.5 million today. But despite nostalgia for vanished glories and the pressure of international problems. Austria's citizens have visibly benefitted.

In real money values this country's gross domestic product has multiplied three-and-a-half times since 1955 when Soviet and Allied occupying troops withdrew under the State Treaty and the independ-ent Austrian republic regained control of its destiny.

During that period the federal budget rose 20-fold. Yet unemployment, a world bogeyman, has declined from 5.4 percent in 1955 to a predicted 2.2 percent in 1981. For Austria, this year's forecast inflation rate is high - 7 percent. Yet its trade balance is healthy, thanks in part to foreign tourism. More than 70 percent of Austrian foreign commerce is with Western countries and only about one-sixth of that with the East. It has increased trading with the Third World, largely to retain access to

Vietnam Closes A Paper

Anthony Kitton

L ONDON — The closure of Ho
L Chi Minh City's Tin Sang (Morning News) last month not only deprives Vietnam of its liveliest paper: it silences the last powerful non-Communist voice in Vietnamese daily life, and almost certainty indicates a hardening of the Communist Party's political line.

Tin Sang was an anomaly, and independent newspaper in a So-cialist state. It was witty, unrhetorical, and sometimes politely but pi-ercingly critical of the regime. It also had plenty of small ads and the best sports page in the country.

Clear Purpose

But the paper had a clear purpose. Originally the most outspoken opponent of former President Thieu, Tin Sang had been closed in the early 1970s and its publisher, Ngo Cong Due, forced into exile, where he remained until the Communist victory of April, 1975. Soon after that he retuned to Victory and president around him a staff nam, gathered around him a staff of former third force activists, and secured permission to publish again.

The staff were sympathetic to the new regime, but independently so; they saw their role as building so; they saw their role as building. a bridge between Saigon intellectu-als and the middle class on one hand and the new Communist rulers of the country on the other.

Communist hard-liners did their best to make problems for Tin Sang, but the paper also had its supporters in the party.

Some senior figures, mostly with extensive wartime experience in the south, took a lenient view towards class questions, hoped for a slow approach to socialization of the southern economy, and looked the West for foreign aid.

In theory the paper requested its own closure, having concluded that its "historic mission" was completed. This fragile diction, however, is destroyed by the arti-cles on the front page of the last edition.

Farewell Speech

One of them, a farewell speech to the paper's staff by Le Quang Chanh, deputy chairman of Ho Chi Minh City People's Committee, combines unusually feeble praise with thinly disguised criti-cism.

After thanking Tin Sang for its "appreciable contribution to the implementation of government policies," Mr. Chanh noted that the paper had reflected the views of "one segment of the masses," not something that the Communist Party usually considers laudable. Mr. Chanh's speech quickly turns to the real circumstances of Tin Sang's closure.

"The country's enemies," said Mr. Chanh, were still trying to "sabotage and hinder the people's progress." Because of this the party had decided to bring all papers under the control of government, party or mass organizations.

Final Cause

The final cause of Tin Sang's death seems to have been the increasingly chilly political climate in Vietnam. As the Fifth Party Congress, scheduled for the end of the year, approaches, the party leadership, evidently fearful for its own position, is becoming less and less tolerant of criticism.

Vietnamese leaders see clear parallels between Poland and their own country, where economic crisis has fueled dissatisfaction among the public and even in some segments of the party.

The fear that Tin Sang woul provide a rallying point for dissidents both inside and outside it party might, then, have been the final nail in the paper's coffin.

Mexican Oil Deal

The Washington Post editorial (IHT, Ang. 27) opposing the Department of Energy's purchase of Mexican oil for the Strategic Petroleum Reserve illogically draws a specific conclusion from a general observation. While it is certainly true generally that government in-tervention in the oil business is bad, it's illogical to conclude, as the Post did, that DOE's SPR purchase was bad. I believe these fac-tors should have been considered: The DOE is getting a market price for the oil produced from a neighboring country with huge, still to be developed reserves.

The quality blend, 60 percent high-grade Isthmus and 40 percent lower-grade Maya, is better than the 50-50 percent blend that Pernex's commercial customers have been getting.

Prices are to be negotiated cust terly starting in 1982; hence DOE can walk away from the deal if it feels the price has become nonmar-ket, without having to defend U.S. immigration policy in 50 doing. The "sole source" contract basis of the Pemex deal does not pose the threat of its becoming a precedent for further government purchases of this kind since "sole source" must be broadly accepted as being in the U.S. national inter-

Politically, the deal should improve U.S.-Mexican relations by helping Pemex to float its current 51 billion-plus international loan package and to forget a former U.S president's comment about Montezuma's revenge. LOUIS BLEY.

FTC Rejects Accord On Chrysler Repairs

Bi Merrill Brown Washington Fort Service

WASHINGTON - The Federal Trade Commission has rejected an agreement signed by Chrysler Corp, and the FTCs staff that would have resulted in Chrysler paying millions of dollars to consumers for the repair of engine damage in up to 58,000 cars, sources said.

The action is the first time in recent memory that the FTC has turned down an offer by a compa-ny to provide redress for con-

The agreement was disclosed by informed sources as the FTC issued a separate consent agreement with Chrysler, which requires the troubled automobile manufacturer merely to notify owners of 700,000 Japanese-made cars sold by Chrysler that special oil filters are needed to avoid another kind of engine damage. No money is involved in the deal, which was approved by the FTC and announced Wednesday.

Rejection of the other agreement - which has left key FTC staff members bitter and fearful of the agency's future direction — came on July 30 after FTC economists suggested that in order for consumers to solve the engine problem, they would have to switch from leaded to unleaded gasoline. Chrysler could have sent as much as $7 million to consumers for the repairs. In fact, sources said the payments to consumers would have been almost totally paid for hy Mitsubishi unner a reimbursement agreement with Chrysler.

The decision is viewed by some FTC officials as symbolic of the agency's continuing hesitancy to bring tough cases that would disturb the business community and the Reagan administration.

James C. Miller 3d, an Office of Management and Budget official and staff director of the administration's regulatory reform task force, has been nominated to become chairman of the agency beginning later this month Although the rejected agreement was not disclosed because of commission confidentiality rules, for-mer FTC chairman Michael Pertschuk dissented from the oil filter decision because of his concern about the rejected agreement.

That decision centers on early failures of balancer chains in up to 38,000 of Chrysler's Dodge Colts and Plymouth Arrows, which are huilt by Mitsubishi. The chains were developed to reduce engine wear by cutting vibranon. The cars were sold during the 1976 and 1977 model years. Mr. Pertschuk wrote in a dissent released Wednesday with the decision.

"Chrysler failed to tell its customers of this problem after learning about it," Mr. Pertschuk wrote. He could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Split by Party

At a meeting on July 29, the FTC was deadlocked on the Chrysler payment plan along party lines, with Mr. Pertschuk and Paul Rand Dixon, both Democrats, voting for acceptance of both agreements, and the acting chairman, David A. Clanton, and Patricia P. Bailey voting against. The next day an agreement was worked out to accept only the oil filter portion of the package.

While refusing to respond to questions on the agreement signed by Chrysler. Mr. Clanton said that "from the standpoint of what our resources are, and our legal duty must be, we can't expect manufactuers to become absolute guarantors for their cars.

U.S. Public Employees Appeal to Voters in Settling Labor Disputes

By Bill Curry

Lus Angeles Times Service DENVER — Faced with tight-fisted politicians and prohibited from striking, many public employees in the United States are reluctantly turning to an unusual labor mediator — the voter.

In places as diverse as San Francisco and Muskogee, Okla., hargaining by ballot — known derisively to union members as "collective begging" — has become a frequent method of resolving labor disputes. Police, firefighters and other public employed. ployees are seeking at the hallot box everything from the right to bargain collectively to pay increas-

A legacy of the rising activism of public employees and taxpayer pressure to reduce government spending, bargaining by ballot will be the way of settling public employee disputes in the future, according to Herh Abshire, Denver's personnel direc-

On Aug. 25. Denver voters, in the most recent ballot box hargaining, narrowly favored the city's 902 firefighters in a contract dispute with the city over the length of the workweek. The next day, offi-cials in nearby Westminster disclosed that voters there would decide this fall whether police and firefighters should he granted collective bargaining sta-

The firefighters had asked voters to decide whether the city's offer of a 12.6-percent raise and a 56-hour workweek was fair. They took their case to the voters after an independent fact finder from the

the city. The firefighters wanted a 12.4-percent raise, with all employees getting a raise, and the current 48-hour workweek. The city's proposal would have denied raised to two categories of em-

Denver officials had hoped to save about $2.5 million a year in an already tight budget and must now cut services elsewhere to accommodate the firefighters or raise taxes.

A low voter turnout — about 20 percent of registered voters — may have helped the firemen in an uphill battle, and most of their support came from hive-collar areas of the city.

Denver is one of the biggest cities in the United States with a formal procedure for taking a contract dispute to the ballot, but in Dallas, Houston and other major cities, police and firefighters have usedlong-standing petition laws to force referendums, with mixed results, on pay raises exceeding those offered by city officials. Although bargaining by the ballot, primarily a Western phenomenon, is becoming more common, it is not necessarily becoming more popular. Labor loses most of the time. In San Francisco, only sewerage workers have won a contract dispute for S3-2-day premium pay — out of six deadlocks submined to the voters. Still, a public vote can sometimes make city officials more generous. In Denver, for example, city employees were given a 1980 pay raise of 6.9 percent, but after losing a November election to win collective hargaining status with the city, they were granted 11.9-percent pay increases in 1981. They want to quiet the natives, said Philip C. Grimes, Colorado director of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, "and it helps break the union."

Firefighters in Abilene, Texas, beat the City Council in an Aug. 8 vote on requiring 1.5 professional firemen for each 1,000 in the city's population. The council had wanted to reduce by 31 the number of paid firemen. Now the city for here were number of paid firemen. Now the city fathers must hire 41 new ones.

"It deals with one aspect of a city's operation without considering its effect on other operations — what are the needs of our senior citizens, for example," said Harold J. Pumford of the Oklahoma Municipal League. "The public would be hard-pressed to develop a sufficient knowledge to weigh those things."

Both labor and city management officials agree that hargaining by the ballot is the result of increased militancy by public employees and m-creased resistance by elected officials to labor demands. Cities also resort to the ballot because they need to resolve an impasse with employee groups that cannot legally strike. That is how bargaining by the ballot came to Denver and a handful of other Colorade size. other Colorado cines. Their approach is now seen as a modei.

First, the public votes on whether municipal em-ployees can organize to bargain with the city. In Denver, only the firefighters have won that right.

Then if contract negotiations break down, in our side fact funder — a professional mediator, for example — conducts an inquiry into disputed integrand makes a ruling. If one side rejects the findings both proposals go to the voters. The side that rejected the fundings pays for the election.

Arbitration is Preferred

"We prefer binding arbitration," said Ron Mosder, president of the Denver firefighters, whose position is almost universally embraced by labor officials. "But without hinding arbitration and the right to strike, that was the only other thing. The best we could do is to go to the people."

"Once the finances are before the public, that's the end of that," said Kermit Francis, director of employee relations in Pasadena, and problem of the Nanonal Public Employer Relations is sociation. # Foreign-Language Papers Losing Struggle Against English

and Korean immigrant, helps his wife heat up the grilla for another day of carryout business. Three hours later, he rushes off to a small office in nearby Arlington, Va.

For the next eight hours, Hong immerses himself in another role: editor of the Hankook Shinbo, a weekly Korean-language newspa-per that covers events in the local korean community.

- Hong is one of a handful of editors in the Washington area who sioned through this year's Tennent-Caledonian award for new work, and brought by the company on its first trip to the Edinburgh Pestival, where it was premiered for a week of performances at Moray

With original music mainly by the New York-born Carl Devis, it shows the symbolic figures of Love and Death working their effect on the Pinto and Perse-phone of mythical Greece, the medieval Tristan and iscult, the fantasy of the Sleeping Beauty and the romance of Cathy and Heathcliff from "Wuthering Heights." In a final episode the love goddess berself becomes Marilyn Monroe, as the modern Aphrodite pursued by Death until they are enclasped together.

These dramatic episodes are like the metrical verse of a ballad framed and separated by the blank verse of lighter unconnected interludes, which reflect the continuing sexual game in ensemble dances of different moods. They range from beach party and ballroom to fancy dress and roller skates, and are set to studies for player-piano by the American composer Conlon Nancarrow, mostly in a jangling, bluesy style that sounded overly loud on the first night.

It is a difficult job. Four of the 10 ethnic newspapers listed in the current city and suburban tele-phone books are, in fact, defunct - victims of among other things, assimilation. Others come and go before they even get listed.

Most of the papers are weeklies. Circulations average 3,000 to 4,000, with most copies sold through subscriptions that cost about $30 a year.

The papers, some of which are slickly produced, usually devote about a third of their pages to community news. Typical fare includes articles about upcoming cultural events and local-ethnicmakes-good stories.

Some stories provide informa-tion unavailable elsewhere, while others highlight news from other media that may be of particular in-terest to the papers' readers.

Three weeks ago, Hong's Hankook Shinbo summarized a Washington Post story about the acaachievements of Asian

For one thing, it lacked slide projections intended as part of Norberto Chiesa'a designs, which include black drapes suddenly stripped to white, a steep ramp to an upper level at the rear, and e raised side gallery for the musicians, conducted by Barrington Pelomg.

The standard of dancing is mostly magnificent, particularly by Kate Harrison as the enticing ghost of Cathy with Christopher Bannerman's Heathcliff, and

Charlotte Kirkpatrick dreamily romantic as the awakened beauty requiring rather more than a kiss from Michael Small's elegant prince. Siobhan Davies conveys much of Iseult's transcendent passion for Patrick Harding-Irmer's doomed Tristan, but the latter part of their encounter, after discovery by King Mark, at present looks muddled and confusing.

Tom Jobe's transvestite "dance of Death," in high heels at one point, somehow reduced the otherwise compelling image he brought to the role, while Celia Hulton, making her transformation from love god-dess to sex goddess in view of the audience, ranged splendidly from symbolic deity to Monroe's manic terror and a glamorously convincing representation of the familiar image.

As a successful film and television composer in Britain, Carl Davis is never less than resourceful in characterizing the separate stories with forms and rhythms evoking their periods, though the Love and Death figures need more than baroque stateliness to

Some observers of the media say that Washington, while home to many ethnie groups, is not a good market for ethnic newspapers. Even dramatic increases in immigration do not guarantee success for ethnie newspapers. Hong says that the six-fold increase in the number of Koreans in Washington in the last 10 years — from about 4,000 to nearly 23,000 — has failed to make life much easier.

The Hankook Shinbo is "a temporary paper," Hong said, and is at the moment helping immigrants adjust to their new land. "But unless Koreans keep coming here in great numbers like they have been doing, in 20 years every Korean in the United States will know English, and they will read English papers," he said. "In the future, perhaps, Korean papers should change into English papers. . . . It is just a natural trend."

It's Rock-Throwing Time For Swiss Heavy Heavers

By Nino Lo Bello

TNSPUNNEN, Switzerland - Any tourist who comes here at 8 a.m. on Sunday will think the Swiss have rocks in their heads.

Every 10 or 15 years in early September, the musclemen of the region come for a stone-throwing contest that has been going strong since 1805 (the most recent one took place in 1968). The particular stone in question weighs 183 pounds, and the hardy Swiss who take turns pitching the bulky boulder have a choice of using one hand or two. So far, in more than 175 years, no contestant is known to have competed with a single paw. Staged on the last day of Switterland's Costume and Alpine Festival, the contest draws thou-sands. Considerable betting goes on, and the odds are pretty high that the record throw, which is I t feet 2 inches, will never be sur-passed. Some Swiss oldnimers, however, stubbornly refuse to ac-cept that historie chuck as a true indicator because they say a stiff wind was blowing.

Hurling the Brobdingnagian stone calls for a special array of foot and body movements that contestants over the years have developed, just like shot-putters and discussibrowers. But there is one limitation: the rules say that the stone-beaver may not utter a single groan from the moment he places his hands on the rock.

Spine-tingling excitement grips Unspunnen as husky herdsmen from the distant mountainsides humber into town flexing their egos. The prize for the winner is a gold medal and an afternoon date at the outdoor hanquet with the girl of his choice. Six local queens are named for the honor, and not infrequently the damsel selected by the triumphant he-man has ended up with a mar-pick up the stone (which has the dates 1805 and 1905 carved into it to mark the first century of the game), raises it over his head and then heaves it into space. As it plops to earth, three judges am-hle out with tapes and make seperate measurements. They confer. Then they announce the distance. Applause. Cheers.

Once the winner has been determined (each competitor gets three tries), the losers lift Mr. Has-What-It-Takes onto their shoulders, and with everyone shoving to touch and congratu-late him, he is borne to the lineup of local beauties who wait in blushing annerpation as he eyes them carefully before making his selection — not without a lot of kibitzing from the sidelines and from the losers.

The site of the festival on the grounds of the Unspunnen Meadow is between the Lake of Briens and the Lake of Thun, affording a good view of the famed 13,653-foot Jungfran peak. Tmy Unspunnen (pop. 50) is less than stone's throw away.

Getting West Berlin Elders To Help With Child Care

By Ellen Lentz

New York Times Service BERLIN — Faced with an increasing number of single parents and a diminishing number of extended families, West Germans are coming up with new ways to involve older people in child care.

One such initiative, known as the Granny Emergency Service, was started in May by Tina Breitinger, a divorced mother of two boys, in an effort to find older men or women to help take care of sick children of working parents or to assist in other family emergencies

In another approach, Parents, a popular West German weekly maga-zine, published an appeal in June asking men and women to send in applications if they felt the need for such a surrogate relationship. Several hundred people responded.

Breitinger, 29, said she had patterned her program after a project that has been under way in Hamhurg for almost two years. "When I heard that the Hamhurg program has a staff of some 80 women, plus a few men, to help with children, I immediately decided that was a project we needed in Berlin too," she said.

A medical technician, Breitinger works part time to support her family. She said she accepts private donations but no support from government agencies. In the long run, she added, the project is expected to be self-supporting. Parents who register with the service pay a fee of $2 a month for each child.

The project is not designed to provide permanent care for preschoolers whose parents are employed outside the home, but rather to get assistance from time to time if a child or a mother is sick or another emergenance from time to time if a child of a mother is sick of another emergency arises and the family has no relative to help.

"There are so many older people in Berlin who complain that they have nothing to do and there are lots of mothers who need help occasionally," Breitinger said. Of the 2 million West Berliners, more than 20 percent are men and women aged 60 or older.

"When my ehildren were little," Breitinger said, "I often had to stay away from work when one of them was sick." Her sons are now 6 and 7 years old and attend day schools. Under West German lew, mothers or fathers can miss work five days a year to care for sick children. fathers can miss work five days a year to care for sick children.

So far, 17 women and two men, ranging in age from 55 to 75, have registered to help in the emergency service. They go to a family's home and care for the children until their mother or father returns from work.

A letter Breitinger is sending to prospective helpers spells out the philosophy of the project: "Through your belp three generations can find new trust in each other. Children need love and care to grow up healthy. They are the future. If we are ready to accept this mutual bond and responsibility, life can be more meaningful and harmonious for you, the older generation, and for parents and children."

Also widespread in West Germany is the so-called day mothers program. Day mothers take preschoolers into their homes while the parents are at work and are paid fees ranging from about $100 to $180 per

More than 55 percent of all preschoolers in West Berlin are enrolled in municipal or church-run child-care programs for part of the day. Since these institutions are beavily subsidized by the city, with parents paying only a nominal monthly fee of $16, there is considerable overcrowding and families often have to wait for months for a vacancy.

Breitinger's project differs in that it appeals to a person's sense of neighborliness and willingness to belp. Elderly men or women receive only carfare or the amount they spend on gasoline — and sometimes a small gift — for their help.

"At first the emergency service got off to a slow start," Breitinger said.
"I was doubtful about its success, but then I thought maybe in the end that will be the one good thing I have done with my life."

BUSINESS NEWS BRIEFS Paribas Leads in Bid to Limit French Nationalization Plan

By Paul Lewis New York Times Service

PARIS — Sitting in the ornate room on the Rue d'Antin, where Napoleon married Josephine in 1796, Pierre Moussa, head of the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, worries about

If President Francois Mitterrand goes ahead with his commitment to nationalize all remaining French-owned private banks, then Paribas, as Mr. Moussa's dynamic investment bank is called, may well lose powerful foreign partners

"They are very nice about it, but they say they don't wish to have a French government institution as a major shareholder and business partner," Mr. Moussa said.

As a result, Mr. Moussa is leading a campaign by France's private investment banks to persuade the country's new leaders to exempt the banks' international operations and their industrial investments from the planned take-

These include A.G. Becker, a large U.S. in-bas has a 30-percent share.

Ira T. Wender, a Becker executive, confirmed Mr. Moussa's statement in a telephone interview. "We would feel very uncomfortable with a French government-owned shareholder," he said, "and we would seek to end the relationship as quickly as possible." A spokesman for Warburg also said it did not wart a rationalized bank as a major shareholder.

In addition, Paribas executives say that Tosco, the independent U.S. oil driller, has warned that it may pull out of a joint oil explo-ration venture in Morocco if the bank is nationalized. A similar warning has come from a private Saudi Arabian financial group, headed by the Saudi financier Suleiman Aloyan, with which Paribas is hoping to form a joint ven-

Last week. Continental Telephone, the U.S. telecommunications concern, said it was pulling out of a planned $400 million joint venture with the French company, Thomson-CSF, be-cause of a plan to nationalize that company.

Mr. Mitterrand and his party are committed to complete the nationalization of the banking system, begun after World War II, by taking over the remaining private French-owned banks, which account for 25 percent of the na-tion's bank deposits. In addition, they are pledged to nationalize major industrial companies, including Dassault, the aircraft manufac-turer, and Pechiney, the aluminum producer.

... Facing a loss of partners and customers

Many French businessmen are critical of the government's bank nationalization plans. "Its not in French interests because a state-owned bank doesn't have the same opportunities in international business as a private one," said Mr. Moussa, pointing out that the three big French nationalized banks, Crédit Lyonnais, Banque Nationale de Paris and Société

Allen Sinai of Data Resources, an economic forecasting firm, pre-dicted, "The panic in the markets will be arrested now by what is being talked about." But only as the cuts actually come into effect will short-term interest rates come down substantially, he cautioned. Meanwhile, the dismay of the ministration at the continued high level of rates was underscored

by Mr. Reagan in an interview ublished by Fortune magazine.

Asked about remarks by Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan that interest rates were too high, Mr. Reagan replied, "I think what Don was saying was that we can have and should have some loosening of interest rates because they're now contributing to the inflation we're trying to cure.

Was the president saying that himself, he was asked? "Yes," Mr. Reagan said. "I'm willing to say it. But we can't dictate to the Fed." Mr. Reagan did not address the question of bow to achieve lower interest rates while continuing a tight monetary policy, which the administration has encouraged the Federal Reserve to pursue.

Mr. Sinai estimated that cutting $10 billion off military outlays next year could cause sbort-term interest rates to fall by 1 percentage point or more in addition to ever other declines might occur. But, be added, such a cut would mean a somewhat weaker economy in 1982 - an assertion administration economists are not prepared to accept.

Prices on Wall Street Skid on Deficit Fears

Thursday sent prices on the New York Stock Exchange spiralling down to their lowest level since June, 1980, with losses recorded in almost every sector.

The Dow Jones industrial average drifted in a narrow range all morning but lost ground quickly in the afternoon to close off 17.22 at 867.01, its lowest point since June 10, 1980, when it hit 864.08. Declines led advances, 1,108 to 275, with volume up to 41.73 million shares from the 37.57 million traded Wednesday.

Prices were sharply lower on the American Stock Exchange as well. Analysts said investors were increasingly glum about the economic outlook, particularly the size of the budget deficit.

Wall Street is skeprical that the government will be able to meet its deficit objectives without further spending cuts. Chester Pado of G. Tsai & Co. said investors also became disap-pointed when buyers did not enter the market at the 880 level of the Dow Jones average, a point where stocks were expected to stage a tecmnical rully. The lack of sup-port caused another wave of sell-

Earnings Fall At BP, Agip

tween Iran and Iraq conflict.

LONDON — Two of Western Europe's leading oil companies Thursday reported a sharp deterioration in earnings, and both said the strength of the U.S. dollar was partly to blame.

British Petroleum, the world's fifth largest oil company, said its profits in the first balf of this year fe0 32 percent to £596 million from £876 million in the same period last vear.

With inflation taken into account, BP tost £23 million in the first six months, compared with a £278 million profit in the first half of 1980.

In Milan, the Italian state oil company Agip, a unit of the state energy group ENI, reported a half-year toss of 125 billion lire ($103 million), compared with a profit of 122 billion lire in all of 1980. Both companies said the deterioration was partly the result of the surge of the dollar pushing up the cost of the crude oil they had to BP said the cost of its oil in dollars had fallen slightly in the sec-ond quarter of 1981, but when converted into other currencies this cost had risen substantially. The dollar bas increased an average of 20 percent against leading currencies this year.

Because of slack demand in its sales markets, BP was unable to recover these increased costs. Its second quarter profit was £201 million, only about half its first quarter profit. Refining operations throughout Western Europe bave been in a slump, with prices of many prod-ucts well below the cost of producing them. BP said its sales of oil products, such as furnace oils, had fallen 9 percent because of low

The man with exceptional goals needs an exceptional bank.

What makes Trade Development Bank exceptional? To start with, there is our policy of concentrating on things we do unusually well. For example, trade and export financing, foreign exchange and banknotes, money market transactions and precious metals.

Geographically, too, we work mainly in areas where we have something special to offer. This includes the U.S.A., where our subsidiary, Republic National Bank of New York, is one of America's 25 largest banks. It also includes a number of less familiar countries, where our exceptional knowledge of local conditions can be an important advantage for clients.

What's more, we keep our backoffice systems running abreast of our business. You may not notice this directly, but it shows up in quicker decisions and fewer errors.

While we move fast in serving our clients, we're distinctly traditionalist in our basic policies. At the heart of our business is the maintenance of a strong and diversified deposit base. Our portfolio of assets is also welldiversified, and it is a point of principle with us to keep a conservative ratio of capital to deposits and a high degree of liquidity - sensible strategies in these uncertain times.

If TDB sounds like the sort of bank you would like to entrust with your business, get in touch with us. We're ready to serve you in most of the world's financial centers.

KUALA LUMPUR — Japanese investors are turning away from Singapore and look-ing to Malaysia to set up manufacturing in-dustries because of Singapore's labor shortages and high wage costs, according to Japa-

Some Japanese manufacturing firms already established in Singapore are also re-viewing their business activities to cope with what they regard as an unfavorable chimate. Japanese industry sources said.

A leading Japanese telecommunications equipment maker, Fujitsu, is one of the companies that have decided to establish plants in Malaysia after comparing its investment climate with Singapore's.

Fujitsu, which has a factory in Singapore, plans to begin manufacturing the same products early next year in a new factory in Malaysia's southernmost state of Johore.

Koichi Ishizaka, a Fujitsu executive, said his company could not expand any more in Singapore even it it wanted to. He blamed the problem of finding workers, especially young women, as well as the increasing labor

Lower wages in Malaysia have prompted Fujitsu's move of a large part of its Singapore operation, he said.

Another Japanese company, Sharp-Roxy, . joint venture making Sharp-brand electrical appliances, is also setting up a factory in Johore. It will have the capacity to make 15,000 television sets a month

A Sharp-Roxy official said the company chose Malaysia over Singapore because of its abundant natural resources and relatively high population along with Singapore's worsening labor shortage.

First TV Exporter

Sharp-Roxy, which plans an eventual work force of 450, will be Malaysia's first television exporter.

Kitamura Industry, a metal-plating company, is starting a factory in Sciangor state near Kuala Lumpur in addition to its Singapore plant, because of difficulties in expandig in Singapore, and because of incentives offered by Malaysia, a company official said.

Some Japanese manufacturing firms, feeling what they call a "sense of oppression" in Singapore, say they are no longer as welcome in the island state as they were in the past.

They note that a Singapore campaign under the slogan "Learn From Japan" is aimed at transforming the country into a financial and technology center in Asia rather than a manufacturing base.

The outflow of investment from Singapore is regarded by Malaysia as natural Japan is already the largest investor in Malaysia's manufacturing sector, with total investment amounting to $280 million.

J. Jegathesan, director of the investment promotion department of the Malaysian Industrial Development Authority, said that labor-intensive firms from such countries as Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan and Singapore have similar problems in finding advantageous places for their investment.

"They are looking at Malaysia, Sri Lanka and Indonesia," he said. "Even if there is such a movement by Japanese firms [away from Singapore] I do not think it has happened just now, it has been bappening over a

Delors Criticizes Banks, Seeks Interest Cut

New York Times Service

PARIS — After a scathing attack on French bankers for their "lack of solidarity" with France's new Socialist rulers, Finance Minister Jacques Delors Titursday sought to engineer a small cut in the cost of credit to stimulate the economy by reducing the interest banks pay on small deposits.

The Finance Ministry hopes to reduce the prime lending rate in France from 15.30 percent to 14.70 percent by relieving banks of the need to pay, a money market-related interest rate on deposits of less than 500,000 francs ($85,178), thus lowering the cost of the funds they borrow. Previously, French banks paid a money market rate of be-

Fighting Back

He added that disgruntled shareholders would be able to prevent the French government from obtaining the overseas subsidiaries of nationalized companies in many countries because their courts would not accept nationalization by a foreign government.

In any case, France's coalition overnment of Socialists and Communists appears confused and di-vided over its nationalization plans, some analysts say. They point to the fact that last week the government put off a decision, from Sept. 16 to Sept. 23, on just what would be taken over and how it would be accomplished.

In fact, of the five members of the Ministerial Committee drafting the proposals, three are known to be out of sympathy with the whole

LOS ANGELES — Brokerage houses, not content to let banks and the savings and loan associations have exclusive domain over the new tax-free "all savers" certificates, may also be selling the oneyear savings instruments to clients of their money market funds.

Shearson Loeb Rhoades intends to offer the tax-free certificates on Oct. I to the 200,000 clients of its money market fund.

Because it is not qualified to receive deposits from the tax-free certificates. Shearson confirmed Wednesday that it expects to act as an "agent" on behalf of one or more other companies - probably banks or savings and loan associations. Those companies would be the ultimate repository of funds received for the certificates.

Even so, the ability of brokerage houses to offer the tax-free certificates allows firms such as Shearson to keep contact with their pres ent clients, and means they will have a better chance of luring customers back into the money ket funds when the tax-free certificates expire in a year.

This unexpected role of brokerage houses in offering the certifi-cates could prove highly valuable as the battle for consumer deposits heats up among financial institutions of all types.

Protecting Assets

IRS Says Banks Must Sever Saving Plan From Lead-Ins

WASHINGTON — U.S. savers can bold onto tax exemptions for the new All Savers Certificate and still take advantage of high-interest lead-ins, the commissioner of the Internal Internal Revenue Service said Thursday.

But savers will lose the federal tax exemption if their bank or savings and loan association requires that the money from the lead-ins - known as "repurchase agreements" - be transferred into the certificates when they go into effect Oct. 1, be said.

Commissioner Roscoe Egger's ruling Thursday basically backed up the IRS' statement last Saturday, which warned that savers could jeopardize their tax exemptions by taking part in heavily advertised lead-in packages offering interest at annual rates of 30 per-

But it also spelled out that the savings institutions and their denositors could save the exemption by

DIPLOMATS IN BUCKSKINS A History of Indian Delegations in Washington City.

FOR nearly 200 years groups of Americans have been descending upon Washington, hoping to secure something valuable, whether lower interest rates, higher veterans' benefits, or perhaps only assurance that the rascals hadn't really dismantled the rascals hadn't really dismantied the public monuments to build marble palaces of their own.

Possibly the most persistent have been the delegations of American Indians described in this book by Herman Viola, the director of the National Authorophysical Authorophysical al Anthropological Archives of the Smithsonian and author of two earlier studies of Indian, white man relations. Only once in the 19th century did a year pass without a visiting dele-gation of aborigines. They continue today, though war bonnets have given way to three-piece suits and interpreters to consultants on subsoil rights.

Colorful Minutine

Indefatigably researched. Viola's account is anecdotal rather than interpretive. In fact, the author often sidesteps important questions; worse, he occasionally tries to answer them with remarks that such-and-such must have been generally true "if the experience of the Ponca delegation of 1877 is typ-

Readers should ignore Viola's attempts at discovering a Big Meaning. which are modest in any case, and just enjoy the wonderful illustrations and relax with the colorful minutae, which are related in unpretentions and clear English.

The pictures and narranve tell a fascinaring tale; how the Indians, with their white agents, would cross the plains and mountains to see the Great Father in Washington ("Great White Father" is probably an early-20th-century racist invention); how they would gather in full-feathered-and-blankered regalia, peace pipes in hand, for an audience with President Jefferson, audience with President Jenerson.
Lincoln or Grant; how the Great Father would benignly express his pleasure at their visit, how the red men would respond with words often poignant, guileless, and sometimes heartbreakingly hopeful; and how the summit conference would conclude with a ritualistic exchange of gifts, the indi-ans accepting medals, flags, rifles and clothing before piling up in front of the bemused Chief Executive a trea-sure of moccasins, blankets, war bounets and buffalo robes.

Then the Indians would stay around town for a few weeks, hag-gling with the Bureau of Indian Alfairs and sometimes getting pawed at in the streets by rowdy white savages. Usually, however, they seemed to have a good time. They stayed in tophave a good nime. They stayed in top-drawer hotels. They got their photos taken. Too often for the B.J.A., they boozed or whored through the night. On occasion they delighted D.C.'s night people, singing, dancing and beating drums on some hostelry's airy veranda. The government almost air ways paid the bills, including ones submitted by doctors who treated those felled by smallpox, syphilis, pneumonia or broken legs (commonly because some playful brave forgot be was in a city and stepped out a third-story window).

It is not always clear what Viola thinks the Indians and the Great Father expected of one another. On the one hand, the government feared the

Yet the visits, whatever their offi-cial purpose, always offered the go-erament a chance to awe and mini-dent the natives. Steam engines and demonstrations of electricity was a pecued to flabbergast them. The pas-dent would urge them to adop the ways of the agriculturist and lean Christ. Without fail, Washington's a thorities made sure to lay before the thorities made sure to lay before the travelers eyes evidence of the union overwhelming population produces wealth, and, most importantly, is irresistible military might.

A Sense of Weakness

It was "at once cheaper and more humane," an official wrote in 1872 "to bring the savages to a resimp sense of their weakness and the in possibility of long contending with the Government, by giving a fer chiefs and braves free rides on our railroads and Broadway one [in side-trips to New York] than h surprising their causes on water nights and shooting down mea was en and children together in the more. The modernists redouble much less often. Most of the time they make the bid they would have made without a double, and a bid of a new suit at the one-level is forcing. Nov York Times Service NEW YORK - For Bjorn Borg. it was little more than a workout. But for Kathy Horvath and Kathy Rinaldi, their first-round match in the United States Open tennis tournament Wednesday touched the limits of their youthful nerves.

She winning or losing a little bit. She bandles it well. The next few months will see Kathy settle in and be more relaxed about it."

Both players had chances. Rinaldi led, 15-30, to break back wards Vilas, seeded No. 6, ad- for 6-all in the final set. But Hor-vanced, 6-3, 6-7, 6-0, 6-4, against vath took the next point with a well-disguised two-handed backhand drop, a stroke she executes as well as anyone on the tour.

From 30-all, Horvath drove a deep forehand down the line that forced Rinaldi to net a forehand. Often criticized for her inability to finish matches, particularly when she has held match points against such ranking players as Chris Evert Lloyd and Andrea Jaeger, Horvath won the contest on her first match point, when Rinaldi's backhand went long.

"Right now, Kathy is more ex-perienced," said Rinaldi. "But playing with the pros. I'll get better. I didn't come here expecting anything."

After Wolves, the Snake

HOLLYWOOD — Slithering celluloid serpents seem certain to snake in circuitous circles across the screen of your cinema theater soon.

There are cycles in horror films. and this has been the summer of the wolf. Werewolves bounded and abounded in "The Howling." "An American Werewolf in London' and Larry Conen's soon to be released "Full Moon High." while real wolves prowied New York in Wolfen.

Snakes, however, were hissing quietly in the corners of a cumber of movies. In "Tarzan." Bo Derek fought an interminable don't-eatme struggle with a 17-foot python, while Harrison Ford and Karen Allen shared a pit with 7.000 assorted asps. vipers. cobras. pythons and boa constrictors in "Raiders of the Lost Ark." And a snake dropped into a bathtub is one of the uglies1 moments of the recently opened Deadly Bless-

Geo Savs Pictures Of 'Wild' Pandas Are Fraudulent

The Associated Press NEW YORK - Geo magazine says pictures of pandas in Geo's August edition, allegedly the first taken in the wild by a Western photographer, were a fraud. Managing Editor David Maxey said the magazine's October issue will include a note of explanation to its readers hlaming the hoax on Timm Rautert, a "known and trusted" photographer who lied and bas since been fired.

Maxey said the photographer was on cootract to the Geo's German sister publication and returned from a trip to China with what he said were pictures of pandas in the wilds of Sichuan province. George Schaller, a panda expert from the Bronx Zoo, questioned the authenticity of the photos. Although the pandas were wild, they were in temporary captivity in a two or three-acre pen at Schaller's research center in the Wuvipeng province's Wolong Nature Preserve, Maxey said. Maxey said that although there was ecough time to remove the photos from the German magazine, the press run for the United States had been finished.

By early 1982, the reptiles will nave slid into stardom in at least two films. Cohen, whose 1974 movie about a mutant bahy. "It's Alive." grossed $2$ million, has written and is directing "Serpent: The Ultimate Thriller." The $5million "Serpent," which stars Da-vid Carradine, Michael Moriarty and Candy Clark, has, as its central character, a flying serpent-hird that is the re-embodiment of the Aztec god Quetzalcoatl. Quetzal-coatl, now living in the turret of Manhattan's Chrysler Building, gets righteously angry because it is no longer worshipped and sets out to provide its own human sacrif-

In Paramount's "Venom." posh London town house is invaded hy a hlack mamba. Supporting the highly poisonous African tree snake in the $8-million movie are Nicol Williamson, Alan Bates, Sarah Miles and Sterling Havden. Paramount is trying to decide whether its advertising campaign for "Venom" should focus on an enormous mamba or on some murky and undefined menace.

The bottom line," said one Paramount executive. "is whether snakes hold a fatal fascination for Americans. Are they a turn-on or a turn-off?"

In the case of "Willard" in 1971, AlP found that rats were definitely a turn-on. In test advertisements for the movie about a disturbed boy and his 500 rodent friends, no one was intrigued into theaters by a poster of a boy with magical powers. However, an advertisement featuring two furry paws, two sharp incisors and two burning eyes packed theaters, and the low-budget film grossed nearly S10 million. Paramount intends to pre-view "Venom" with two different campaigns in demographically matched theaters in matched cities to see how the American public reacts to snakes. Given Hollywood's penchant for imitation, 1982 may well be the year when moviegoers had better look hefore they step.

Russell Baker is on vacation

Portrait of a Narc

Uncle Sam's Liaison Man in Marseilles Frets About

A Revival of the French Connection

By Jeffrey Robinson ational Herald Tribune

ARSEILLES Jim Hilbert is 46 years old, stanus-feet 10 and weighs 150 pounds. His hair is thinning and just starting to gray at the temto gray at the tem-ples, and he might well look like the accountant he once studied to be. But he's not. He's a narc. He joined the U.S. Treasury Department's Federal Bureau of Narcotics in 1963, when there were only about 300 agents in the business. That makes him one of the original narcs. "I grew up in a small town on the Ohio River. A manijuana cigarette there would have brought the whole town down on you. They would have lynched you. I chose the field because it seemed like the most in-

His first assignment was Cleveland, then Detroit, then New York. In five years he made hundreds of husts, flashed millions of dollars in small, used bills to set up buys, trained to keep his reflexes sharp, saw people die, and got street-wise. "If the people in the husiness find out you're an agent because they see you talking to other agents, that's not so bad. Killing a federal agent is a no-no. It puts ton much beat on the street. Problems come into play if the guy you're trying to set up doesn't have anything to sell. If he's just some sort of stickup man. Or if the guys you're trying to huy from think you're an informer. Stickup men don't know the rules. And informers get murdered."

Tour in Vietnam With CIA

In the late '60s he went to Vietnam on a two-year tour with the CIA. Then he re-turned to Detroit as a narc, working for the Justice Department's Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs. In 1978 he left the United States to run a one-man office in Rahat, Morocco. His beat was narcotics intelligence in 26 African nations. At the beginning of this year Hilbert moved into an office on the third floor of the U.S. Consulate here.

There is an elevator down the hall, the same elevator people use to get from the main floor visa section to the passport secuoo one flight up. But the elevator doesn't stop on Jim Hilbert's floor unless you have a special key. Not everyone is welcome. His office is large, with a black couch stuck in between his desk and the donr. Guests sit on the couch; he faces the couch. He is not the kind of man to sit with his hack to a door. His hills are paid by the Drug Enforcement Administration of the Justice Department. In a sense, he is only a fenant at the consulate. It has been 20 years since the United States first stationed narcotics agents in Mar-seilles. The film "The French Connection" made the job famous. Reality, he says, makes it an 8 to 5 job. "That's 8 a.m. to 5 a.m."

While he said no to a photo, he did say that he believed intelligence agents in this type of work should maintain a high profile.
"I'm n liaison and intelligence officer who coordinates everything he does with the French police. They are super cooperative. But any agent can go to a police source and get information. A real intelligence agent is a guy who can get information from non-police

Restrictions on Weapons

So he is a liaison and intelligence officer. Not really a gumshoe. Not really a spy. Not really a paper-pusher. Although the use of weapons is severely restricted by U.S. governous and the severely restric ernment rules for agents working overseas, he stays current with a .38 snub-nose special and can get one fast if he needs to. In 18 years he has been in four gunfights. Some friends have been shot down or hlown away.

He says the higgest part of his job is helping the French police tie together loose threads. A report comes in from Turkey that a shipment of morphine base has been made. Another source puts known chemists in the area. They bear about people buying precur-sor chemicals, like acidic anhydride. It is used industrially, which means anyone can huy it, but it's also needed for making heroin, when people buy it Jim Hilbert and the French police want to know why. Then they hear about certain purchases of glassware flasks, tubes and bottles.

And that is what has been happening here lately. For the first time in a long time there's talk on the streets. It seems that a French connection might be going into business. Not the same French connection crowd portrayed in the film. Most of those are dead or in jail, or they have simply disappeared. The opening shots of the war were fired in July when for the first time in several years, the local narcotics police with Hilbert as their American liaison man, made a hust.

"A dozen people in the Marseilles area had been under surveillance for nearly a year. They rented a farmhouse near Saint-Maximin. We knew they were ready when they got to the stage of buying glassware. We gave them enough time to set up. Then at dawn on the morning of July 9th the French police hattered down their front door. Two men were arrested inside. A third made the mistake of showing up two hours later."

The entire gang was eventually rounded up. That particular lab was put out of business. The bust was a good one. Twenty kilos of morphine base. Wholesale value as heroin. $4 million.

For most of the 70s, Marseilles had been relatively quiet. Perhaps the "French Con-nection" film brought too much attention. A lot of the heroin aimed at the U.S. market was sent through Italy. But Jim Hilbert 5255 that is changing.

There are families in Marseilles who have traditionally dealt in drugs. That's their husitraditionally dealt in drugs. That's their nust-ness. They get their morphine base mainly from Turkey, although there's been increased activity in Iran. Pakistan and Afghanistan. The middlemen tend to be Corsicans. Smng-gling is for some Corsicans also a traditional business. There are people we know dealing who have never been touched. It takes time. who have never been touched. It takes time. The guy who supposedly financed the lab we busted in July was someone from Marseilles we'd been hearing about for the past seven or eight years." They've got him now, but there are a lot of other people they don't yet have, may not even known about; people who are in this for big money and who do what they do with the skills of any big-money professional. "The lab we husted probably got its morphine base into France by boat or car ferry. We don't know. It doesn't come in with some hood driving a car. It's brought in by middle-aged couples in campers. Or a family with kids and picnic baskets. To get drugs into the States, they trap a car, they hide beroin all over it. If they do it well, they can smuggle 2 God-awful amount of the stuff."

Prices of Heroin

He noted that in 1963 a kilo of heroin was in the $20,000-$25,000 range. Today the wholesale price is closer to $200,000 a kilo. The effect of that raid in July should be visible about now on the streets of America. The price goes up because the supply is down. Purity goes down too, and that's a good sign for us. It shows we're hurting the traffic. But then as long as there's such a strong demand for heroin in the States, those $4-million busts will only cause a small dent. Someone will always come along to fill the
